FROM THE HEART

Say "I love you" in any tongue this Valentine's Day at the Place des Abbesses in Montmartre, where a new "Je t'aime" wall boasts the amorous phrase in 280 different languages. Starting in 1992, the French poet Frédéric Baron started asking a variety of people, from restaurateurs to missionaries to tourists, to write the phrase in their language on a sheet of paper. He then transferred the words onto a wall built expressly for this purpose. Cyberlovers can practice saying "szeretlek" in Hungarian or "Dama la bëgg" in Wolof, at www.lesjetaime.com
